Polyflor's Standard XL vinyl tiles were used to help create this bold and dramatic flooring design at the PALS Building in the artistic and trendy Salt River suburb of Cape Town, South Africa.

Market Segment:
Workplace & Corporate
Office

This eye-catching, 3 dimensional effect floor concept was designed by Karpinski Interiors in partnership with One Point Zero Interiors for a client in the marketing and advertising industry. The 300m of Standard XL tiles in Dove White, Black Panther and Slate Grey from Polyflor South Africa were installed in a continuous, chequered pattern by flooring contractors Top Carpets and Floors Little Falls.

Space:
Office

Ensuring that the installers copied the pattern exactly was no easy task. Tom Karpinski from Karpinski Interiors commented,

"We ended up having to do an initial mock-up of the floor so that the installers could get their head around the geometrical pattern and order in which we wanted the tiles to be laid to achieve the desired effect. They even joked of feeling that the patterns made them feel slightly lightheaded and giddy, which was exactly the impact we wanted the floor to make."

Tandy Coleman-Spolander from Polyflor South Africa commented,

"We were very impressed with the overall look and feel of the floor. The designers managed to take a standard hard wearing tile that was not very expensive or exciting, and use it in a creative way that got everybody talking. This project is once again proof that your only limit is your imagination and the enormous versatility of the Polyflor range".
